John C. Rosenbek Ph.D., BC-NCD

Dr. Rosenbek is Professor and Chair for the Department of Communicative Disorders at the University of Florida. His clinical specialties include neurologic abnormalities of language, speech and swallowing. He is board certified in the area of neurogenic communication disorders. His research has concentrated on developing behavioral treatments and measures for determining their effectiveness. He is presently investigating treatments for deficits in emotional communication and for swallowing disorders following neurologic disease. He is a Fellow in the Speech-Language Hearing Association and received both the Honors of the American Speech-Language Hearing Association and the Kleffner Career Clinical Award for 25 years of outstanding clinical service.

Donations

You may make a charitable contribution directly to the James L. Case Scholarship Endowment online <http://clas.asu.edu/giving/>. Due to the fair market value of benefits provided, registration fees are not considered charitable contributions. Net proceeds from the conference will be used to benefit the annual James L. Case Scholarship in the ASU Foundation.

All funds will be deposited with the ASU Foundation, a separate non-profit organization that exists to support ASU. Please consult your tax advisor regarding the deductibility of charitable contributions.

A box lunch is included in the registration fee.

Practicing Dysphagia in 2010

Practice in dysphagia is evolving quickly. Rehabilitation is replacing compensation for nearly all patient populations. The evidence base for rehabilitative techniques is growing. The attitude that tubes are a treatment is in retreat. Patient desire and quality of life are as important, and sometimes more important than are an institution or practitioner's assumed risk. These topics will be developed with patient examples and against the background of a realization that the speaker, like many members of the audience, will have clinical responsibilities on Monday a.m. after the conference.

Learning Outcomes

At the end of this workshop you will be able to:

- describe the major rehabilitative methods for improving strength.
- distinguish methods that influence strength from those that influence skill.
- know the ethics and risk-benefit of tube feeding.
